How did the Fund perform during the reporting period?

For the fiscal year ended May 31, 2024, the Fund outperformed its benchmark, the Russell 2000[®] Total Return Index. We attribute the main drivers of returns to the three categories of insights: Catalyst, Quality, and Relative Value.

Catalyst-related exposures were positive drivers of performance for the measurement period, and it was the best performing theme for the fiscal year ended May 31, 2024. Catalyst insights seek to gather sentiment and actions by a variety of market participants.

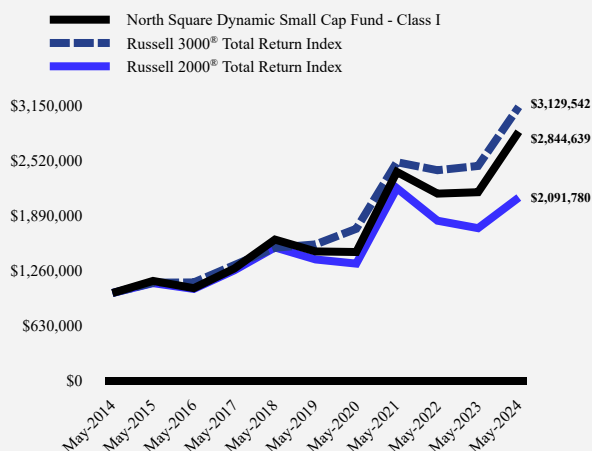

Quality exposures were also positive contributors during the period. Quality type characteristics did well during the market uncertainty brought on by the higher-rate environment that was prevalent for the fiscal year ended May 31, 2024. Investors favored quality characteristics like attractive cash-flow features, balance sheet strength and profitable growth as they assessed the impact higher rates would have on companies.

Relative Value-related exposures also generated positive returns during the fiscal year ended. The contribution from valuation insights was relatively broad-based, but the various cash flow metrics, as well as ratio-based composites, delivered the strongest positive performance for the investment theme.

The Fund aims to be diversified across its three main investment themes, and is currently balanced with a tilt towards Catalyst and equal exposures to its Relative Value and Quality themes. While the pace of inflation has been easing, strong readings in the employment market might indicate that the timing of rate cuts might be further out in time than believed a few months ago. We are therefore continuing to maintain relatively larger weight on Catalyst exposures, with the potentially continued frequent and rapid shift in investor sentiment, while still ensuring the Fund is tilted towards fundamentally stronger companies with a relatively attractive pricing.

How has the Fund performed over the last ten years?
